Somebody has been guilty of offenses against the law, which would warrant in dictment under at least half a dozen different sections of the Penal Code and also under the Revised Statutes of the United States.

These offenses were committed in connection with the dredging contracts of the Dock Department.

They have been suspected for a long time, but ey were proven positively when Capt. Thomas lcMahon testified before the Commissioners of Accounts to the frauds practised by the Union Dredging Company on this city.

The evidence already taken by the Commissioners of Accounts shows that $1,100,000 has been paid by the city to this Company for

How much of this sum was paid on fraudulent vonchers is now to be proven.

Corporation Counsel Clark said this morning that while Capt. McMahon's revelations show that a number of officials of both the Dock Department and the Union Dredging Company committed offenses which render them liable to indictment, he has not yet called the matter to the attention of the District-Attorney's office.

Indictments can be found for grand larceny, for bribery, for forgery, and, under section 672 of the Penal Code, for fraudulent presentation of bills or claims to a public official for payment.

Dock Commissioner Cram was the first witness called by the commissioners of Accounts on the continuance of the investigation this morning.

The witness testified that he was reasonably sure that the Union Dredging Company has been doing its work at the West Washington Market faithfully, for he had inspected their work and had two watchinen appointed by himself to watch them.

He did not agree with President Post that it would take fifteen years to master the methods of the Department, for, said he: "I have revolutionized the law methods, and it has taken me but ten days.

The Commissioner testified that he abelieved the city could do its own dredging much more cheaply than at present.

He had brought up the question of buying a plant by the Department, and Chief Engineer fireene had estimated that it would cost $300,000.

A Man Found Wandering in the Street with His Throat Cut.

Lying in the Presbyterian Hospital this morning, weak from exposure and loss of blood, and with a big wound in his throat, is Christian Rapp, an engine cleaner in the Grand Central Depot yard.

Yesterday was his pay-day. Rapp came home late to his house, 313 East Thirty-ninth street, the worse for drink. His wife tried to keep him indoors, but he would not stay, and went out after getting something to est. It was past midnight when Policeman Mon-

The man was drunk, and stunid either from exposure or the loss of blood. There was a big gash in his throat, made with a keen-edged knife.

The policeman walked his man to the station and sent for an ambulance, while the surgeon sewed up the wound and ascertained that the knife had cut nothing but the fiesh, Sergt, Hamilton squeezed out of the man with infinite trouble the information that he was Rapp, the engine-cleaner. The wound in his throat was over three inches long. It might have been made in a fight, or Rapp might have made it himself. He had, however, no knife or other weapon.

There is a flat-house at 199 Fgst Seventy-fifth street near where Rapp was found. A little inquiry developed the fact that people living there who came home from the theatre had found Rapp in the vestibule, drunk, but apparently not cut at that time. They called the saloon-keeper on the ground floor of the house and he put Rapp out on the street.

The saloon-keeper told the people that Rapp had not been in his place, and there had been no fight. He put him out in person, but without violence. out violence.
Directly opposite the door through which he was "fired" the officer found Rapp's hat, broken and smashed.
Rapp is in the Presbyterian Hospital. His wife is sure that he did not cut himself, but had a fight with somebody.

cated in the Ballot-Box Contract Forgery ?

Wood, the Convicted, Has Made a Clean Breast of It.

Foraker Was Guiltily Concerned,

R. G. Wood, the Ohio ballot-box contract forger, who tried to put Candidate James E. Campbell in a political hole, has made a com plete statement of his case to his attorney, and implicates a prominent Republican in guilty knowledge of the forgery. The name of this politician is withheld. "Col. Tom" C. Campbell, who was for eight years the Prosecuting Attorney at Cincinnati, but has been practising law in this city with Arthur Murphy as a partner, paid a visit last week to the Ohio city, where his wife lay ill. Col. Campbell is a dyed-in-the-wool high-pro tection Republican, but he is and has been for many years the warm, personal friend of his namesake, Gov. elect James E. Campbell, and of Congressmen McKinley and Butterworth and of Congressmen McKinley and Butterworth and Senator Sherman.

While in Cincinnati he was induced to take a hand in behalf of R. G. Wood, the man charged with forging the names of Campbell, McKinley, Cox. Butterworth and Sherman to the now famous bogus ballot-box contract with the Hall & Wood Ballot-Box Company.
The accused, Wood, is also charged with libel in circulating the forgeries which carried the idea that Jame E. Campbell and the other gentlemen were stockholders in the Ballot-Box Company, and in this connection Wood, a precious rascal, does not propose to stand as a precious rascal, does not propose to stand as a scapegoat. He has turned over to Col. Campbell papers, letters, telegrams, and the like, which implicate a certain very prominent Ohio Republican.

which implicate a certain very prominent Ohio Republican.

Col. Campbell will not return from Ohio till to-morrow, but his partner, Mr. Murphy, said to an Evening Wonld man:

"As a lawver, I shall express no opinion, but the unnamed Republican, indicated in Murat Halstead's explanation in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette of how he got the alleged contract and how he was fooled by it, was undoubtedly Gov. Foraker.

"Looking at the matter as I do, I should say that Joseph B. Foraker, an intelligent, keen lawver, who has served a term on the bench, ought to have known, if he didn't, that those signatures to that contract were forgeries."
There is a signular fitness in "Col." Campbell's being called into this case. He served through the civil war, but came out of the service as a captain. The title of "Colonel" was given to him by Murat Halstead's Commercial Gazette when he ran for Prosecuting Attorney.

Capt, Kastrup Saw. There is much conjecture among the members of the Maritime Exchange this morning, concerning the identity of the corpses of the man and woman, who were passed floating at sea on and woman, who were passed floating at sea on Monday morning by the Norwegian bark Christian Seriver, which arrived here yesterday.

Capt. H. A. Barnes, Superintendent of the Old Dominion Steamship Company, does not believe that the bodies came from the Manhattan.

Not a woman salied on the ship, "he said to an Eversino Worar man this morning," and again, the captain of the Christian Seriver reports that the fragments of deck-houses and other wreekage were painted white. The deck-houses on the Manhattan were of adight grayish brown in color, and could hardly have been mistaken for white.

"I am inclined to think that the wreekage came from the steamboat Crystal Wave, which was sunk near where the Manhattan went down in a collision with the Cleopatra about six weeks ago. She was painted white, and all her boats. in a collision with the Cleopatra about six weeks age. She was painted white, and all her boats, rafts and cabins were of that color."

His Lawyer's Pariner Confident that A Woman Shoots Down Another Woman and Wounds Two.

> Terrible Affray In a James Street Tenement.

One Victim Dead and One Likely to Dia.

Two Men Who Took Part in the Affray Make Their Escaps.

A Flerce Encounter In Which Six Took Part.

An infuriated woman did deadly work with revolver in a miserable tenement on the top floor of the four-story house, 69 James street, at a little past noon to-day.

One victim, a woman, was instantly killed with bullet through her head. Another woman was pierced through the body, the shot entering her left shoulder and coming out at the breast.

A third victim was an old woman who received a wound in the elbow. A messenger boy ran breathlessly into the Oak street station at 12.20 and told the Sergeant on | bring out the fact of their mysterious disappearduty that a shooting affair had taken place at 69 James street. Officer Carter was despatched and picked up the several officers whom he met on the way. At 69 James street he came upon a wildly gesticulating crowd of Italians in the street. He followed their dir. ctions and ascended to the upper floor.

There he found the body of a young and handome Italian woman reeking in blood on the floor, and three small children shricking and wringing their hands, while the father stood pale-faced and motionless.

The story of the fatality was obtained with much difficulty, and as to the result Assunta Scantano, a tailoress, twenty-six years of age. was taken into custody, and is now at the Oak Street Station, where she refuses to talk.

The murdered woman was Antoinette Varallo. the wife of Salvator Varallo, and from the lips of little eight-year-old Gertrude, who saw her mother killed, was obtained the story. The little girl says that she and her mother live at 7 James street.

They were visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Maria Cerase, and Assunta Scantano, Gertrude Percio, Petronella Percio, Antonio Buzuto, who is the husband of Assunts, and Guiseppe Scantano, her brother, were there. They got into a quarrel over the ownership of some furniture.

Words led to plows, and then three revolvers appeared. Each of the men drew a pistol, and Mrs. Buunto also had a revolver.

There was shooting right and left, and ten shots were fired altogether.

When the smoke cleared away Mrs. Varallo was dying on the floor, and her mother and Percia were wounded.

It was a shot from Assuna's weapon that killed Antonio Buquto and Guiseppe Scantano fled the house. Mrs. Buguto, whose maiden name was Scantano, crawled under a bed. The officers found the murderers there ashen white and in a state of abject terror. All of the participants and witnesses of the fraces who could be found were placed under arrest. Mrs. Cerase is over fifty years old, while Mrs. Varallo, the murdered woman, was twenty-six, Petronille Percio is only twenty-two. The wounded were removed to Chamber Petronilia Percio will probably die. She is a sister of the murdered woman. The husband of the murdered woman said the disagreement arose over whether his wife a furniture might be stowed in the rooms of his mother-in-law.

'I know that, but that news is only given as a rumor. Warden Osborne was called up on the telephone last evening by a reporter, who said The scenes which followed are described as that he had heard that the Governor had refused Executive elemency, but that was only a

I think they would be the first to hear from the Governor and let me know."
Carlton sat down again, and after a moment's silence said:
"Will you go over to Howe & Hummel's office for me and find out for certain if the Governor has acted yet or not? I think the Governor will at least grant a reprieve."

The reporter went to the lawyers office and saw. Joe "Moss, who in answer to his question said:

"I received a despatch from the Governor at 0 o'clock last night, stating that Executive elemency was refused. We have not told Carlton yet, but will do so to-day."

The reporter returned to the murderers' cage. When he walked in Carlton gripped his cigar more firmly between his teeth. No one spoke, until at last Carlton almost in a whisper asked:

"Well, how is it?"

"It's against you, Harry. Joe Moss says the Governor refuses to interfere. You must disto-morrow."

he said.

"It will be the same one on which Packenham and Nolan died in August last. Sheriff Fack has provided Carlton with a new suit of clothes. He is wearing them new and will die in them.

"I can't yet name the hour when Harry will hang, but it will be about 7 o'clock to-morrow

Prisoners in the Raymond Street Jail Vote Him Innocent. John Greenwall, convicted of the murder of day his hope of receiving Executive interference in the form of an order for an inquiry by a referee.

"I am innocent, and I think the Governor will give me a fair chance to prove it," said Greenwall this morning to a reporter who conversed a moment with him.

The prisoner has bee me somewhat nervous as the fatal day approaches.

He has lost flesh since he was placed in the south corridor of the jail and the death-watch put over him.

However, he eats and sleeps well, walks a great deat in the limited space allotted to him, prays night and morning and reads his Bible at intervals during the day.

The Rev. Father O'Hara calls at the jail every day and ministers to the condemned man's spiritual welfare.

Warden Brymer has done everything in his power to make Greenwall as comfortable as a man with the gailows staring him in the face can be made, and the prisoner thinks a great deal of the Warden, often expressing his good wishes for him, as well as for Keepers Lee, Wilson and Brennan and the Sheriff's death-watch, Deputies Lamp, Boile and Campbell.

Lawyers Auderson and Perry are in Albany to-day busily engaged in pleading with Gov. Hill in Greenwall's behalf.

A vote was taken among the prisoners in the jail as to their be left in Greenwall's innocence or guit, and it stood 346 for acquital and 2 for conviction.

The conversation then drifted to Atkinson, the hangman, "Have you ever met him" asked THE EVEN-ING WORLD MAN. 'Only once," replied Harry, with a slight

"Only once," replied Harry, with a slight simider.

"When the four men were spending their last night here previous to their hanging in August last they sent for me to bid them good by.

"I was crossing the yard when I ran full tilt against a short man, and from the descriptions that had been given me of him I knew it was "Joe 'Atkinson, the hangman.
"I seemed to red instinctively that we would meet once more," he concluded with a short, mirthless laugh.

The reporter bade the unfortunate man farewell and went out to Warden Osborne's office just in time to meet Under-Sheriff Sexton coming in to make final arrangements for Carlton's hanging. hanging.

hang, but it will be about 7 o'clock to-morrow morning."

He disappeared within the gloomy interior of the prison, and a moment later the ponderous gate on the Frankin street side of the Tombs swung open to admit "Joe" Atkinson and his two assistants.

The hangman danced in smiling and happy, and into Warden Osborne he came to set up the gailows.

After the execution of Carlton and Greenwall his occupation will be gone in this State, as any man convicted of murder hereafter will probably die by electricity.
